It has also been undertaking research project financed by external funding agencies, like UGC, ICSSR etc.

ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Today, India is known as one of the largest economies in the world. India, as an economy, has witnessed a lot of ups and down in its journey since its independence in 1947. The country was miserably poor due to relentless drain of wealth and brutal de-industrialization by the Britishers.

After independence, Indian economy started its economic journey with the concept of five-year plans administered by the Planning Commission of India in 1950.

A transformation from third world country to one of the biggest economies was not that easy but India did that. India's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) stood at ₹ 2.7 lakh crore at the time of independence. In seventy-five years, it touched ₹ 135.13 lakh crore.

Seventy-five years later, our ideals have transformed as India seeks to join the $5 trillion club. Armed with necessary macro and micro growth drivers, the stage is set for India's investment cycle to kick-start and catalyse its recovery towards becoming the fastest-growing major economy in the world.

This one-day national seminar on 'Economy@75' is actually an endeavour to celebrate the journey of the Indian economy, the challenges the economy faced and how it revived itself during these seventy five years.
